MasterCard has announced changes to the refund rules for its 3D Secure solution, MasterCard SecureCode.

It previously offered global protection against fraudulent transactions to merchants allowing their customers to pay using SecureCode, regardless of whether cardholders received the service from their card issuers or not.

Since 1 February, MasterCard excludes all commercial cards from its global fraud protection. Commercial cards issued within the EU will, however, continue to be protected. Commercial cards include company cards and purchasing cards. The change brings MasterCard SecureCode's terms and conditions into line with those of Verified by Visa.
